Dr. Dino William Ramzi , MD, MPH

Dr. Ramzi received his medical education at McGill University specializing in family medicine as well Master's in Public Health from Emory University in Atlanta. His academic interest has been at the intersection of health policy, management and health outcomes.

He has taught at residency programs, been a Medical Director at a Community Clinic Inc. in Rockville, MD and Chief Medical Officer of an Federally Qualified Health Center in Pasco, WA. He was instrumental in opening Providence's first Clark County clinic. He has served as President of the Clark County Medical Society and is active in the Washington State Medical Association and Washington Academy of Family Physicians, lobbying and speaking on topics related to primary care's vital role in the health of our communities and how to reform the health system using sound policy principles.

In 2016 he opened Patient Direct Care, a Direct Patient Care practice in Battle Ground, Washington and recorded the fastest direct primary care start-up in history. Dr. Ramzi and his wife live in Washougal and are very active in all aspects of their community's life and growth.

CCRW is a fast growing Republican Women's organization and is currently one of the largest in the State of Washington. The website is ClarkCountyRepublicanWomen.org.
